March 23, 2009: 12:09 PM ET

ZURICH -(Dow Jones)- Credit Suisse group (CS) clients who lost money on securities issued by collapsed U.S. investment bank Lehman Brothers Holding Inc. (LEH) are teaming up, a lawyer representing some of those clients intending to form a group, said Monday.

Fifteen law firms representing 850 Credit Suisse clients will form a group and potentially pursue legal action against the Swiss bank, Daniel Fischer of Zurich-based firm Advokaturbuero Fischer & Partner said.

In total, the clients want to recoup 34 million Swiss francs ($30.1 million) in losses. Fischer said nearly half of the group of what he termed financially inexperienced investors is made up of retirees who put their pension money into Lehman-issued paper.

Credit Suisse, which has bought back nearly CHF100 million in Lehman-issued products from clients, wasn't immediately available for comment.
